StellaSport's Luxe Separates

Sportswear is most definitely having a moment—I've spotted countless celebs rocking their fitness gear outside the gym, styling it up for lunch dates and off-duty cool. And in terms of the high street, it doesn't get much better than the bright, bold and glossy pieces from the latest StellaSport offering. Stella McCartney launched the line in collaboration with Adidas back in January, and I can't get enough of these practical pieces that look just as good with my weekend basics as they do on the treadmill. It's definitely all the motivation I need to hit the gym!

Radley's Colour-Block Bloomsbury Bag

I fell in love with this beauty as soon as I set eyes on it, and it's sure to add oomph to any accessory collection. The clashing shades give the timeless bowling shape a fresh twist, while the long strap means it can be worn cross-body as well as carried by the top handles. I'm well and truly obsessed!

Get It On Regret It Lippie That Lives Up To Its Promise

I've finally been tempted out of my nude lipstick comfort zone, just in time for the first airing of my new spring wardrobe. The hot product that's done it? Max Factor's Lipfinity in Just Bewitching. Reap the positive side effects of this poppy coral colour: for starters, it lasts more than five minutes (the clever topcoat seals in the colour), but even better, I got comments on my skin looking brighter while I was wearing it. I want one for every bag I own, so I never have to be without it!

As part of its SS15 campaign, high-street institution United Colors of Benetton has tapped supermodel Joan Smalls, who has chosen her favourite pieces from the new collection to wear in the ads. From gingham pencil skirts and summery frocks, Joan proves there's literally nothing she doesn't look good in, which is unsurprising really, given that she's one of the world's most successful models.

Taylor's Brit Dragon Dress

Winning her first Brit and our best-dressed award thanks to this Cavalli frock, Miss Swift is on fire right now

Forget Madonna's fall (ouch) and Kim K's on-stage selfie, it was Taylor Swift's head-turning dress that we couldn't get enough of at this year's Brit Awards. Bringing a whopping dose of A-list glamour to proceedings, Swift swept onto the red carpet in a dramatic made-to-measure Roberto Cavalli dress. Demure from the front, a quick spin revealed a sheer back and scarlet sequin dragon. And it seemed the lady herself inspired the design, with Cavalli revealing to us: 'I love Taylor, she is strong and fearless, like the dragon. She has an incredible sense of style.' Yup, we agree.

“Any Marriage Goes Through Ups & Downs”

Slamming her critics, opening up about sex and why Professor Green is more house proud than hard as nails. Millie Mackintosh gets frank with Look...

Slipping a bottle of green juice at London's Soho House, Millie Mackintosh is trying to settle on the coolest fashion name in her mobile phone contacts list. We're not waiting for long. Christopher Kane, announces Millie, is an 'amazing designer', who she befriended at a party recently, fortunately just before the start of London Fashion Week. Christopher later invited Millie to one of his stores and she was given 'loads of outfits'. A few days later, the same thing happened at Brit designer Giles Deacon's London HQ.

'Ahead of his London Fashion Week show, I went to his showroom and met him,' explains Millie. 'I got an amazing outfit and another for the Brit Awards.'

I felt really lucky to be doing that. If designers lend to me, I'm so grateful.'

Millie means it. After all, this is a woman who bared her heart and soul in the name of entertainment on Channel 4's Made In Chelsea, the show that made her famous. And while some reality stars like Olivia Palermo sashay effortlessly into style-icon territory, high fashion is a notoriously tough nut to crack.

'Some designers aren't willing to lend to me because of the reality TV tag,' admits Millie. 'And I'm cool with that – [it's] becoming a bit less and less now.'

Millie proves her point every time she sits front row at a catwalk show – and more and more celebs sidle up closer to her on it. At Julien Macdonald last week, she was shoulder to shoulder with Whitney Port and Ella Eyre. Two days later at Giles Deacon, Amber Le Bon became her new best friend.

'When my mum saw me on the front row of the Julien Macdonald show, she screen-grabbed the picture and sent it to me, saying: "You look The Dream". She and Dad are so proud, especially of my clothing line.'

Millie's eponymously named collection launched last October – to such high demand that the site crashed – and the first instalment of her SS15 range goes on sale this month. Today, there's further exciting news to share.

'You're the first I can tell that I've got ASOS on board,' says Millie. 'They don't stock other celeb lines, so it was hard to get on there. It's a strong place for the collection to be.'

Boom! But, of course, none of this success is a surprise. Millie has been career strategic since removing herself from BAFTA-winning

Made In Chelsea in June 2013. She signed up for Celebrity Masterchef, because she 'loves cooking', but avoided fast-buck options like I'm A Celebrity... or Celebrity Big Brother.

'I didn't just want to be famous for doing a reality show or do the predictable things that certain reality stars have done,' says Millie, who instead endorsed brands including Nip + Fab, Claire's and St Tropez.

'I had opportunities to do clothing collaborations, but I waited because I wanted to do it my way. I own part of my business; it's my own brand.'

Millie admits that in business she's been 'a bit naive' in the past, something her husband Stephen Manderson, aka rapper Professor Green, 30, has been eager to iron out. 'Stephen helps me think about what people might actually want from me,' she says. 'He thinks I can be too optimistic. He's more of a realist, but sometimes can be too much of a pessimist.'

Singing from her own happy hymn sheet, Millie deflects when we ask what the biggest relationship test has been since their wedding in 2013. 'I don't really want to talk about [the] negative,' says Millie. 'Any relationship [goes] through ups and downs, and things are difficult for the other one – you just support each other through them.'

There's no doubt that Millie and Pro Green are a strong team. They've spent the past 18 months renovating their £850,000 marital home in south-east London, which they moved into last June. By all accounts, Stephen was as hands on as it comes.

'He was so involved in every detail, down to where the plug sockets were going to be,' says Millie. 'He picked all the light fittings and was so excited when we chose all our paint colours.'

'Our home life is really normal,' she adds. 'I went to the NME Awards [two weeks ago] and left at about 10pm. I picked up some Vietnamese food, then went home to Stephen. We watch a lot of Netflix and are really into Fortitude on Sky.' We picture a homely scene featuring The Mandersons on the sofa in matching onesies.

'No onesies, but we both have pjs,' says Millie. 'I have silk ones and he has stripy ones. I got him some Ugg slippers for Christmas. He was like: "What. Are. They?"' but he does wear them.'

Christian Grey, eat your heart out. Perhaps, unsurprisingly, the Fifty Shades Of Grey phenomenon has been lost on Stephen who, reveals Millie, is 'refusing to see' the film.

'Do you know what? I don't want to see it, either. I didn't find [the book] that sexy. I'm sure the film will up the sales for all kinds of kinky sh*t, but I think women should just talk about sex more anyway. We're so British and prudish. I talk about it with my girlfriends. That's normal, right?'

Absolutely. And if sex is on the menu of conversation, surely that means baby

“Women should talk about sex more. We're so British and prudish”

In Made In Chelsea with former co-star Spencer Matthews talk will follow? Frustration washes over Millie's face.

'The only pressure I'm getting about when I'm going to have a baby is from the press. My family aren't pushing me; everyone else is saying: "Wait a bit, just enjoy being married."'

'I absolutely love kids and Stephen is always telling me that I'll be a great mum. I like nurturing and cooking for people, but I'm not rushing it. I'm really enjoying just being married.'

While many women her age are navigating their way around Tinder, Millie insists that marrying at the tender age of 23 was a no-brainer.

'I knew it was the right decision, because I was with my best friend, my partner in crime. Yes I was young, but I knew I could grow with him.'

Once Fashion Week is done, Millie returns to her delicatessen-owning parents' house for a week of 'normality'. Because however much fun it is, life in the spotlight, plus managing her business projects – including a forthcoming lifestyle book – brings tension.

'I do get really stressed and call my mum crying and say: "I just can't cope with it." Sometimes it all just gets a bit much.'

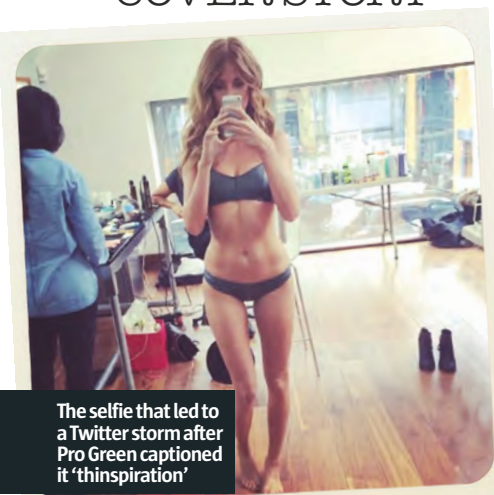

If she was so inclined, Millie could live off Stephen's millions. Some might even assume that with a great grandfather who invented Quality Street that Millie is financially made for life.

'I'm not an heiress,' she clarifies. 'My family don't own Quality Street. If people think I've had everything handed to me on a plate, or don't think I work hard, I can assure them I do. I could never not work and I'm not going to let Stephen be the breadwinner. I need to earn my own money.'

Millie first moved to Chelsea at 18 to follow her dream of being a make-up artist, landing a job as an £8-an-hour beauty advisor at Space NK, before Made In Chelsea called. And although the show portrayed her as a want-for-nothing girl with millions in the bank, it was, suggests Millie, somewhat exaggerated.

'I'd get the bus down the King's Road to do the show, be filmed in a Bentley, then get the bus home again,' she says.

Leaving Made In Chelsea coincided with her engagement, plus speculation that Stephen was instrumental in her decision to jack in her TV career, something she denies. So what of his tendency to leap to her defence on Twitter, like the time he launched a tirade against her former co-star Spencer Matthews, saying: 'You're vile, don't utter a fing word about our engagement – it's none of your fing business.' Does she cringe when he lets rip?

The selfie that led to a Twitter storm after Pro Green captioned it 'thinspiration'

'Not at all. He stands up for me on Twitter and that's really sweet, because he's just being supportive. Sometimes I say: "Oh babe, it's going to be an even bigger story if you say something." Sometimes I think it's better to leave it because people want a rise out of you.'

Millie was forced to spring into action last July when Stephen retweeted a snap of her in her bra and pants to her 813,000 followers with the comment 'thinspiration' – a term favoured by pro-anorexia websites.

'It was just unfortunate wording, he didn't mean it to be offensive,' she says, playing down the fuss. 'He loves how much I work out and look after myself.'

Size eight Millie exercises five times a week, has two personal trainers – Richard Tidmarsh and Russell Bateman, who runs the Skinny Bitch Collective – and regularly posts video clips of gruelling gym sessions. She says she's 'always on the hunt for the exercise that's going to change my body' and seems excited by a new workout called One Rebel, a treadmill and resistance training combo. She's also toying with a Beyoncé dance class, although her dyspraxia – a disorder that affects coordination – may hinder its success.

Millie acknowledges she's 'a bit of an exhibitionist' – case in point her recent naked shoot for a women's fitness magazine, but furiously objects being targeted by body bullies who deem her 'too thin' to be a role model.

'It's just ridiculous,' sighs Millie. 'I'm never going to be a really fat person, that's not my build. There's such an obesity problem in this country and I'm literally saying look after your body. I'm not saying diet or starve yourself. But people think that because I'm thin and I work out, that's putting an unhealthy image out there.

“There's such an obesity problem in this country. Literally all I'm saying is look after your body”

'Exercise balances out my lifestyle. During Fashion Week, I went for lunch with Stephen and had a massive bowl of truffle spaghetti. But because I had to get into a super-tight dress a couple of days later, I then balanced it out with lots of salads and trips to the gym.'

Glance through Millie's Instagram and you'll see pictures of those salads – plus much else of what she eats. At last count, a plate of courgette twists in pesto had 8,960 likes.

'It's scary how addictive social media can be. I have to tell myself off when I'm photographing my food before I've eaten it.'

Does she feel addicted now? 'There are times when I think: "OK, I'm using it too much." Sometimes it feels like I'm seeing my life through my phone.'

But we'll cut Millie some slack. With the house, the husband, the hot bod, the ever-expanding career and a wardrobe of clothes to die for, it's a life we wouldn't be able to resist showing off, either.

Look Hits Lond

After a whirlwind of endless catwalk shows, trends and soirées,

Camera phones at the ready for the Burberry show

on Fashion Week

the Look team bring you everything you need to know about LFW

Our feet may be tired – and our wardrobes exhausted – but the extravaganza that is London Fashion Week has finally finished, and we can't quite believe how incredible it was. There were what seemed like a million shows, parties and presentations to attend, and we arrived at each of them in style thanks to our swanky silver Hyundai Santa Fe keeping us on schedule.

From sharing FROW space with A-listers to catching up with Millie Mackintosh and spotting killer street-style trends, we had a team of video experts on hand to film the whole thing. Head to Look.co.uk to check out the vids. If only we'd managed to capture Naomi Campbell's dramatic entrance to the Burberry show...

Ah yes, Burberry. We always look forward to the fashion behemoth's show spectacular, and this season didn't disappoint. As usual, there were more celebs than our camera phones could cope with, but we were mainly obsessed with the supermodel invasion of the FROW, as Cara Delevingne, Kate Moss, Jourdan Dunn and Naomi (who arrived a whole 20 minutes after the show started!) shared bench space with the likes of Sam Smith, Maggie Gyllenhaal and Mario Testino. While we'd hoped to see the Brit supers in the catwalk line-up, we were more than entertained by their hilarious front row antics as they clapped, cheered and posed for selfies.

The show itself was a beautiful bohemian rhapsody of patchwork, embroidery and glorious fringing. And as the models embarked on their finale march, an explosion of glitter rained over it all, making for a magical catwalk moment.

Mulberry HQ provided a much-needed moment of calm as we swooned over the brand's sumptuous new offerings, which didn't last long as we were almost caught in a stampede (literally) by the gigantic paparazzi mob outside the Topshop show, who were clamouring to get a pic of Cara and Kendall Jenner.

Thankfully, we managed to survive the crowds to bring you news of all the hottest trends, while hunting down the high-street hits that all the show-goers were wearing FROW-side. And don't forget the street stylers – their 'It' buys will give you a wardrobe refresh in an instant.

That's another LFW in the bag. We're off to put our feet up!

Kim Hires A Therapist... For Her Bum

Devoting hours on end to her most-famous asset, Ms Kardashian's hired a professional to make her posterior even bigger

It has its own assistant to rub sand on it, has single-handedly 'broken the internet', and now Kim Kardashian's bum has a therapist! After seeing pictures of herself on the FROW and at parties standing beside celebs including Rihanna and Chrissy Teigen, the 34-year-old is reportedly feeling so insecure about her body she's decided to dedicate a lot of time – and money – to improving it. 'Kim sees all the paparazzi photos and she's not happy with how she looks compared to other celebs,' a source tells Look. 'She's decided she needs to work hard on her figure, which is crazy. She looks amazing.'

But rather than just hitting the gym (come on, this is Kim K!), she's employed a professional 'butt therapist' to make her bum even larger. 'She reckons if she can get a bigger butt then the rest of her will look slimmer,' says our insider, revealing that the expert is with her for four hours a week and has Kim doing 'butt homework' when he's not there. 'The therapy is already getting results but it's really intense. She has to lie on a massage table for two hours getting her butt slapped with little electric rods which send tiny shocks through her skin.' And if being prodded and slapped for hours on end wasn't enough, Kim is also having painful lymphatic drainage massage, which is said to remove toxins from the body. The treatment takes 45 minutes and sees Kim being massaged from her feet upwards, to loosen her lymph nodes. This is followed by a heated algae wrap all over her tummy to make it flatter.

'Kim also uses a state-of-the-art £700 electric massage tool that is said to kill cellulite,' says our source. 'She runs it up and down her bottom every morning. It pulsates and kneads the skin on her butt between rollers.'

While we'd be squealing in pain at such a gruelling schedule, Kim is taking it all in her stride. 'She says beauty is pain,' our insider adds. 'She constantly obsesses about her body and the older she gets the more she worries, as she's convinced her metabolism has slowed down. She knows that it'll take a lot of work to get her body how she wants it, and she's more than willing to put the time in.'

High Street Sneak Peek!

Primark's Amazing High-Summer Drop

Yes, we know it's still a bit chilly outside, but you can never be too prepared when it comes to your new-season wardrobe

Oh Primark, how you tease us. It may only be the start of March, but the high-street institution has only gone and dropped its high-summer collection. With festival and holiday season just around the corner (come on, we need something look forward to), the Woodstock-inspired collection is just the ticket for an outfit overhaul. There's fringing, embroidery and a 70s colour palette. Worried about the beachy vibe? Don't be. The boho separates will look ace with denim right now, and we can totally see that swishy tassel skirt working with tights, chunky boots and an oversized knit. Anyway, fashion folk are always investing in the best new pieces months in advance, so this is the perfect excuse to get your wardrobe up to scratch before summer. Now if you'll excuse us, we're off to book a holiday...

The Awards Speech That's Changing Your Life

It was the moment that got Meryl Streep and Jennifer Lopez on their feet. Look investigates why Patricia Arquette's inspiring speech affects UK women, too...

No one expected that the stand-out moment of this year's Oscars would be an acceptance speech. It was meant to be Eddie Redmayne bursting into thankful tears, or Jennifer Aniston sneaking off with Julianne Moore's trophy behind her back. But as Patricia Arquette collected her award for Best Supporting Actress for her role in Boyhood, she used her platform to deliver a rousing feminist argument, asking for equal pay women.

'To every woman who gave birth to every taxpayer and citizen of this nation, we have fought for everybody else's rights,' she said, while the audience of A-listers whooped and Jennifer Lopez – alongside Meryl Streep – stood up and cheered. 'It's time to have wage equality once and for all... The truth is, even though we sort of feel like we have equal rights in America, right under the surface, there are huge issues that are applied that really do affect women.'

But while Patricia was specifically addressing women in the States, her message applies just as strongly to the UK, too. After all, this is the country where the gender pay gap has just increased for the first time in five years – even though the Equal Pay Act was adopted 45 years ago. 'The knock-on effect of the pay gap for women in the UK is obvious,' explains Ellie Cumbo, 32, a charity campaigner for Fabian Women's Network. 'As long as women are generally the lower earners, it'll always make financial sense for them to quit their jobs, rather than their partners, if someone needs to stay at home to care for children. We may have equal rights in law, but it becomes meaningless when day-to-day reality doesn't reflect that.'

'Many solutions have been proposed to deal with the pay gap in the UK,' adds Ellie. 'The really tough ones include mandatory audits of larger employers to check they're paying men and women equally. At an individual level, there's surely nothing more important than knowing your rights, and working together. I'm a great believer in women creating networks and acting as mentors to each other.'

'Feeling as though you're not alone is certainly one of the things that helps women ask for what they deserve, and act when they don't get it. If Patricia Arquette's comments have helped even one woman to realise that she can change her circumstances, she's done some good.'

Women's charity campaigner, Ellie Cumbo

Equal Pay: The Facts

- The UK fell out of the top 20 most gender-equal countries in the world for the first time in 2014.
- Average wages for women fell by £2,700 in a year to just £15,400, while the average salary for men remains unchanged at £24,800.
- Only one in 15 women working full-time earns £50,000 or more per year, compared to one in seven men.
- Wednesday 4 November is Equal Pay Day and it illustrates the extent of the pay gap – for the last two months of every year, British women effectively work for free.

Perfect Husband

Benedict Cumberbatch & Sophie Hunter

Who needs a honeymoon when you've got the Oscars? Less than two weeks after tying the knot, Benedict, 38, and Sophie hit the red carpet – with her looking lovely in Lanvin (featuring a racy side split) and him looking even more loved-up than usual. All of the excitement (cough, champers) must have gone to his head though, because Benny referred to Sophie as his 'fiancée', prompting raised eyebrows from his pregnant wife. Whoops! Thankfully the newlyweds laughed it off and were later spotted posing for selfies with Benedict's parents, who'd flown over for the occasion. Aww.

As if we couldn't love the Luther hunk any more, he took his 14-year-old daughter as his Oscars date. The 42-year-old proved his worth as the coolest dad in the world by letting Isan share the spotlight – even posting a video on his Instagram of them, captioned: 'Daddy Daughter time #Oscars Love you Iss.' Cute.

It's A Jen Love-In

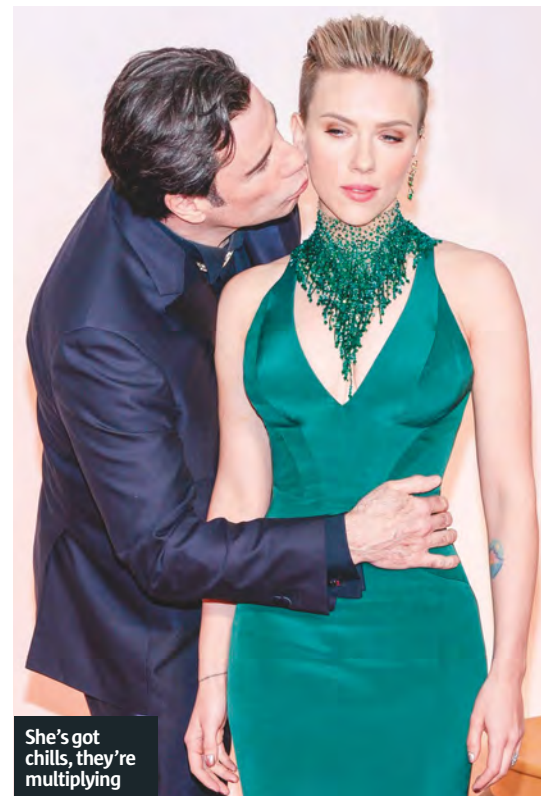

Jennifer Aniston, Justin Theroux, Jennifer Lopez, Isla Fisher & Emma Stone

Hands up who loves Jennifer Aniston. Everyone? Yep, that's what we thought. And that's exactly what we saw at the Academy Awards, too. Whether the 46-year-old was squeezing Emma Stone's bum through her Elie Saab dress, kissing a heavily pregnant Isla Fisher's baby bump, photobombing J-Lo or giving her fiancé Justin a romantic embrace, the loved-up actress looked happier than ever. Well, we'd be in a good mood if we had a Versace gown like that too!

Awks Award

Scarlett Johansson & John Travolta

If there was a prize for the most awkward Oscars kiss of all time, then this would be it. Scarlett, 30, did not look impressed when John, 61, snuck up and planted a kiss on her cheek. In fact, her complexion seemed to almost match the shade of her green Versace gown. Crikey.

She's got chills, they're multiplying

'Oh please please let him spell my surname right'

Trophy Wife

Eddie Redmayne & Hannah Bagshawe

With a glass of champagne in one hand and his Alexander McQueen-clad wife of two months Hannah, 32, in the other, Eddie, 33, spent the Academy Awards beaming like the cat who got the, well, Best Actor Oscar. After picking up his award (and melting our tiny hearts with his moving speech), the pair popped over to the after-party to get the statue engraved with his name. Which, incidentally, is something we assumed took place before the ceremony. Oh, you do learn something new every day.

Meet The Women Who Will Inspire You!

With International Women's Day on 8 March, we wanted to celebrate the women who are changing their lives – and yours – this year

'I'm Using My Cancer To Make Other Sufferers Feel Beautiful'

Andrea Pellegrini, 39, from Harrow, gives beauty advice on her YouTube channel Baldly Beautiful. She lives with her husband and two children

'When you go through chemo, you reach a point where you don't recognise yourself. You lose all your hair – even eyelashes. It has a profound effect on your self-esteem. How do I know? Because I was diagnosed in July last year, and since then I've been on a mission to make other sufferers feel good about themselves.

It was my husband Paul's idea to set up the channel – I'm a make-up artist and he suggested I show others how to cover up the side-effects of chemo. I wasn't so sure – I was losing my hair and didn't like the idea of the world seeing me. But then I spoke to some women on an online group: they were all struggling and had no idea how to make themselves feel good.

I began filming videos once a week, covering topics from pencilling in your eyebrows to tying head scarves. I got floods of emails from women saying how the videos had given them confidence.

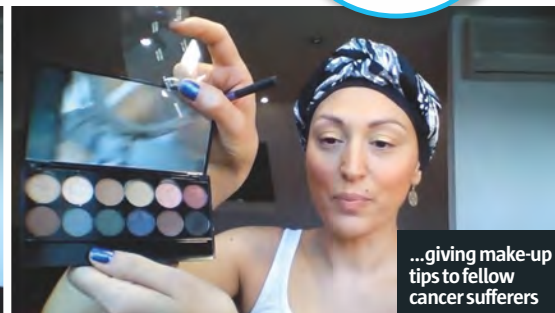

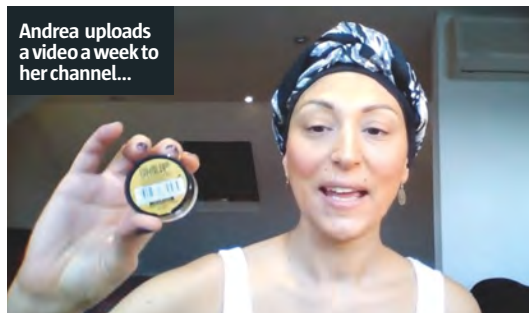

It's helped me, too. I'm approaching the end of my treatment and there have been times when I felt unmotivated. Everyone who gets a cancer diagnosis tries their hardest to keep positive but it's not easy – there's always that dark thought in the back of your head. But filming gives me a focus, even when I want to wallow, as I know there are women waiting for a video. I'm giving other people a little boost when they need it most, and that's an amazing feeling.'

Andrea is now approaching the end of her treatment

Sahar films daily life in Kabul on her camera

'We're Risking Everything To Show Our Daily Struggle As Girls In Afghanistan'

To watch Nargis, Sahar and Sadaf's film, search for This Is Kabul on YouTube

Nargis Azaryun, 22, and sisters Sahar Fetrat, 19, Sadaf Fetrat, 23, are young filmmakers who have lifted the lid on what war-torn life in Kabul is like for women in a short YouTube film

Imagine hearing gunfire, being harassed daily and even receiving death threats every time you leave your house. Or wanting to go and meet a friend but being unable to do so, as it's after 9pm and it would be too dangerous. This is what life is like on the streets of Kabul for young women, as three young filmmakers Nargis Azaryun, 22, Sadaf Fetrat, 23, and Sahar Fetrat, 19, have highlighted.

The trio decided to film their everyday life over a two-year period to showcase what it's really like to live in a country ravaged by war. They filmed throughout 2012 and 2013, when US and UK troops were still in the country – and fighting broke out daily. The video, released this year, shows the girls going out for ice cream and having to flee as gunfire breaks out. However, alongside the constant fear of war, the trio also have to face harassment from men who, everywhere they turn, show outrage at the fact they don't wear traditional female dress, and are driving and using cameras in public places.

However, this doesn't deter the girls from filming the documentary, even when a man said he would 'behead' his sister if she were to do the same. 'It's hard for all walks of life in Afghanistan, but it's especially hard for women,' says Nargis. 'A girl has to fight for her rights from the day she's born until the day she dies. And girls have to convince people that they are actually entitled to these rights.'

'The situation for women in Afghanistan is unacceptable to me,' adds Sahar. 'So I want to be a person who contributes to change. If we don't say anything, no one else will either.'

Becky turned her love of bright knickers into an ethical business

'My Fashion Line Is Changing Vulnerable Women's Lives'

Becky John, 38, lives in Southampton and is the founder and managing director of Who Made Your Pants?

'There's undoubtedly a lot of bad things happening in this world. We know this. But it's of my opinion that simply telling people about the bad things does no good at all. Most want to help, they just don't know how. Who Made Your Pants? aims to change this—it's a small lingerie company, run by me and based in Southampton, giving jobs to women who have had a hard time in life. We make all our pants from excess fabrics sold on by big underwear companies and provide a safe, happy environment for these women to work in. By buying a pair of our pants, you're doing something you would have done anyway but also helping to keep someone in a job who desperately needs one. It's a win-win situation.

The idea initially came about as I've always loved fun, brightly coloured underwear. But then I realised the pants that brought me so much joy were probably made unethically. As a long-time human rights activist this idea horrified me.

So I set about opening a little factory, employing women—mostly refugees from war-torn countries, including Afghanistan and Somalia—two years ago. We train them up, no matter what their background, and provide them with a place they can feel safe. One woman came up to me the other day and said: "This is my favourite place in the whole world." It was a brilliant moment.

I often focus on what we can do next, rather than on the present. I make sure to pause and think of everything I've achieved so far, and look forward to helping lots more women through the simple power of pants.'

We provide the women with a place where they can feel safe

'I Want To Help Young Women Break The Glass Ceiling'

Vanessa Sanyauke, 27, is the founder of Girls Talk London, a service that connects young women with senior women in competitive or male-dominated industries

'We're currently living in a country where women and men still aren't equal, and only 20 per cent of our Board Directors in the FTSE top 100 companies are women. And it's only getting worse: children are gender segregated more than ever, and young girls are increasingly taught to aspire to be bad at maths and good at being princesses. This has to change. It was this reality that inspired me to set up Girls Talk London in 2012. I've long believed that the only way to change our future is to inspire and encourage the younger female generation, but when I was growing up, I had no access to more experienced women who could have taught me so much.

In previous roles I've set up mentorship schemes and, at the time, I was working in the City, so by using these contacts, I set up my first event. I asked some of the women I knew to give a talk to a group of schoolgirls, asking them to speak openly and honestly about how they got to where they are today. The talk was a hit and since then I've had a huge variety of speakers and hold events in schools and other spaces quarterly. On the website there's also an online TV channel and a wide range of articles for ambitious young women.

There have been so many brilliant speakers – my favourites have included the singer VV Brown and Diane Abbott, who spoke about women in politics within the Houses Of Parliament. The talks have helped so many young women, and I regularly receive emails from those whose lives I have directly affected. After attending the events, girls tell me that they know what they want their career to be, or that they have even applied for jobs (and got them) within the companies of our female speakers. This is amazing, but what I really love about the role is that I've created this brilliant community of women. When I began I had no idea of what I was capable of, or of how helpful and inspiring women as a group could be. Now I know, and it's truly wonderful.'

'I'm Inspiring Men To Be Feminists... Through Tinder'

Laura uses Tinder to discuss feminist issues with men

Laura Nowak, 24, from Toronto in Canada, set up feminist social media account, Feminists On Tinder

A dating app where you judge people on their looks may not be the most obvious place for feminism, but that's exactly why waitress Laura Nowak chose Tinder as the outlet for her inspiring project.

'I wanted to document male reactions to feminist issues,' she said. 'I don't want women thinking they have to settle for being objectified if they want casual sex, and I don't want men on Tinder being systematically categorised as creeps.'

Laura starts conversations with the men she matches with on topics ranging from who pays for dinner to equal pay, and then posts the screenshots online. The results, she says, have been mixed: 'One third are men who generally support feminism and two thirds are men who are openly misogynistic.'

When she's greeted with this misogyny, instead of ignoring or blocking the men, Laura chooses to point out where they have gone wrong, in the hope they'll show the next woman they match with a bit more respect. Taking down sexism on Tinder one man at a time? We love your style, Laura!

You're hot but you're not gonna attract any guys on here with those feminist questions. Maybe if you toned it down a bit. What I mean is, you'll win more guys with candy than with vegetables.

Just a thought

But I like vegetables

Gigi HADID

'It's Cool To Be Nice'

She's our current model obsession, the new face of Maybelline and counts Kendall Jenner as her BFF. Beauty Ed Sam spent a day in New York to chat all things beauty with the gorge 'It' girl

Walking into the Dream Hotel in midtown New York is a bit like walking onto the set of your very own music video. With swanky velvet couches dotted around the foyer, a giant pillar fish tank in front of the reception desk and high-heeled ladies running around holding Valentino dresses, the atmosphere only made meeting the new face of Maybelline, 19-year-old Gigi Hadid, that little bit more exciting. After arriving early (keen!), I had to wait 30 minutes before sitting with the beauty in a brand-new penthouse suite.

If you haven't heard of Gigi, let me introduce her. She's BFFs with Kendall Jenner and her family also star in reality TV show Housewives Of Beverly Hills. When we meet, she's just come from walking in the AW15 Tommy Hilfiger show and is still wearing the make-up – a gorgeous bronze eye, beautiful brows and a nude glossy lip. She gets up to greet me when I walk in, and apologises. 'Excuse the towel,' she says (it's lying across her legs). 'It's just so cold outside it takes me ages to recover when I finally get in.' Drama queen she is not. New York was a bone-chilling minus 15 degrees the day of our interview.

TOMMY HILFINGER

“I love boxing but I absolutely hate going to the gym”

Under the towel we can see (and of course ask about) her cute outfit. She kindly checks all the labels and tags for us – she’s wearing a knitted Pink Stitch black polo-neck, black fitted RTA Denim jeans, high black ankle boots from Vince and a grey baseball-style jacket with leather arms from Fay. I confess I stalk her on Instagram (@GigiHadid), which she giggles at. Well, I am one of her 1.9 million followers. I can’t wait to find out more.

Hi Gigi! You started your modelling career at a very young age, what was your first job?

Well, I actually started modelling when I was four – I signed for my first Guess campaign, and I did a bit of Baby Guess and Guess Kids back then. I didn’t find it hard work, they just took me to the beach, let me play with some toys, took my photo, and that was it – all of a sudden I was a model. But my mum was really adamant that she didn’t want me to be a model while growing up. She wanted me to go to school and play sports like a normal kid, and develop my own talents. The fashion industry is hard to work in when you’re young, everyone is seriously judgmental. I think some people get in too young. I’m so pleased I built my confidence first.

Did you always want to be a model?

Yes, I think so. But I still like to do a lot of things. I’d love to have my own cookery show one day, and I’m at school at the moment studying criminal psychology, so I’d like to do something with that too.

Brains and beauty, we like it! What do you like cooking most?

I love cooking for my boyfriend [Cody Simpson, a pop singer], he loves steak, pesto pasta and asparagus wrapped in bacon.

I think next time we meet you should do the catering!

Oh yeah, sure!

What’s the best part of your job?

Travelling, and working with a lot of cool people. There’s always talk that models are very catty, but I feel the industry is changing a lot and it’s cool to be nice. Plus, it’s great to have friends in the same industry, so it never feels like hard work.

You work with your sister (fellow model) Bella – do you like having your family involved with your work?

Yes, we always have a lot of fun together.

On a recent magazine shoot, Fergie’s song Glamorous came on, and we started doing this dance routine. It’s really fun and easy to be on set with her.

Do you swap modelling and beauty tips with your bestie, Kendall?

It’s so nice to experience everything together. We both started modelling at the same time [both girls walked in their first runway show in AW14 – Gigi for Desigual and Kendall for Marc Jacobs] and now we’re going through everything together. It’s great. We’re taking very different paths, but we experience things through each other. For example, she does some really amazing runway shows, and I do amazing campaigns, so it’s really nice to talk about it and share stories.

Do you get nervous before a show?

As I’ve been doing it more and more I don’t, but it’s always dependant on two things: the shoes and the music. When I have comfortable shoes on I’m usually fine. Today, for Tommy Hilfinger I wore lace-up wedge sneakers, so they were super-comfy. I was walking to Missy Elliott’s Work It, which I love, and then the finale was Beyoncé’s Crazy In Love, so I knew I was going to be fine. It was an awesome show.

Gigi Hadid Interview

On Instagram I always see you boxing – is that how you stay in shape?

Yes, I love boxing and absolutely hate going to the gym. Whenever I'm not working I go to Gotham Gym in New York – the trainers there are like my big brothers.

What do you do when you're on the go and can't get to the gym?

I love walking. Obviously it depends where I'm shooting, but if it's safe and not too cold I'll walk home from a shoot or go for a walk beforehand, especially if it's uphill. It's good for my legs and bum. If I'm in a hotel I'll use the hotel gym, but I'd much rather get room service and watch a movie after a long day.

Who gives you body/beauty envy?

It has to be Candice Swanepoel, she is just amazing.

What food do you crave the most?

Umm, everything! Usually pasta or a burger and fries.

Who do you turn to for the best beauty advice?

My mum is really good for things like that. The best thing she ever told me was if you get a spot, put toothpaste on it, sleep with it on and it'll dry right out.

Are you a facial or a massage kind of girl?

I'm not a big facial fan, but I love having massages.

What beauty advice would you give yourself five years ago?

Never use a strip false lash [laughs], always use single individual lashes.

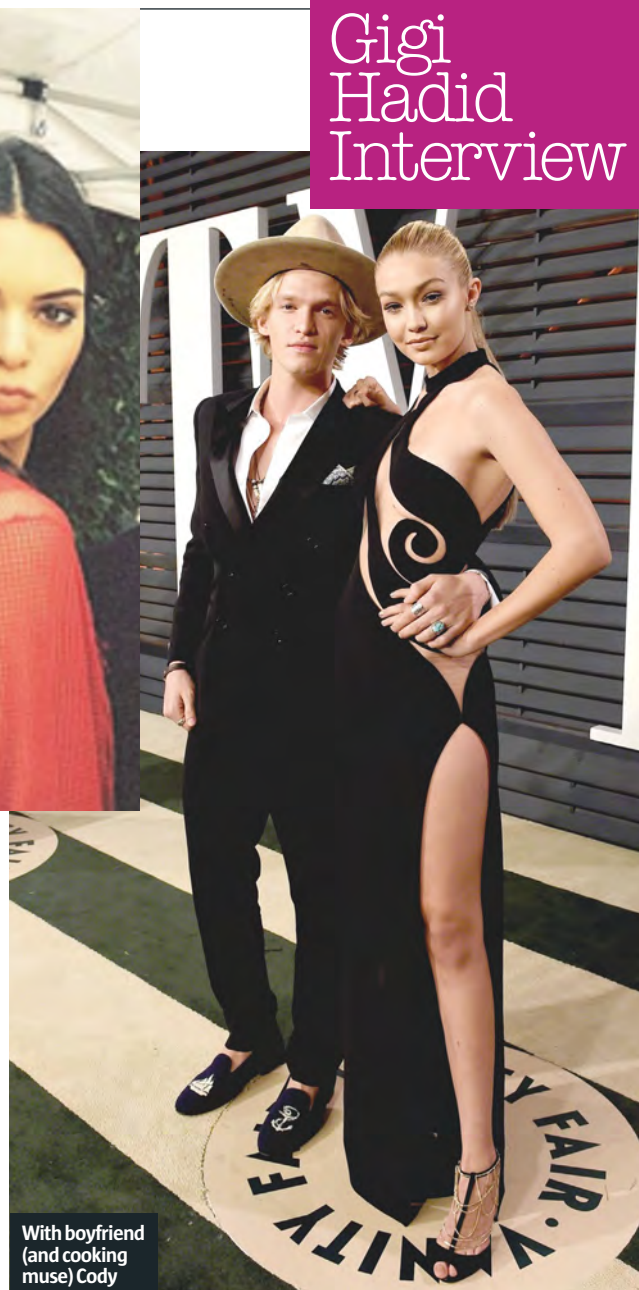

Having a cheekbone-off with BFF Kendall

How do you enhance your amazing cheekbones?

I make a little fish face, sucking in my cheeks, then using a brush with a slanted edge, I swipe bronzer right into the socket of my cheeks. It's the easiest and best trick I've learnt.

What do you like to do with your hair when you're not working?

Usually if I just wash it I can leave it to dry naturally overnight and it goes super curly, which I love. I put in John Frieda Frizz Ease Serum, £6.29, before it dries, brush it through and it just takes out any frizz.

Meet Your New Beauty Gurus

Get expert personalised advice tailored to you from the comfort of your living room...

You know how celebs look achingly good 24/7? It's not just good genes; they also have a team of make-up artists, hairstylists and skincare experts on speed dial, who help preen them to perfection. If you've ever fancied the same (and let's face it, who wouldn't?), now you can!

Tesco has gathered together a group of bloggers and industry gurus to offer you one-on-one consultations where you can chat hair, skincare and beauty techniques online. Once you've decided who you want to answer your questions, they'll recommend products to suit you and your budget via a video chat. And the best bit? You don't need a celebrity bank balance – each consultation is totally free.

The 15-minute sessions are available Monday to Friday, 10am-7pm and can be booked via the Tesco Beauty Hub at Tescoliving.com/beauty/consultations. Now all you need is that red carpet...

Chat To LOOK'S Beauty Editor

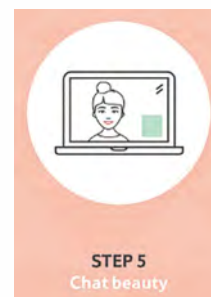

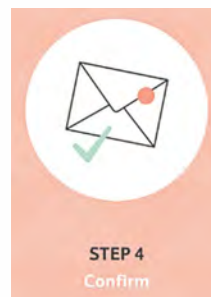

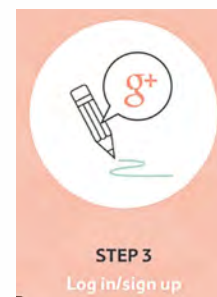

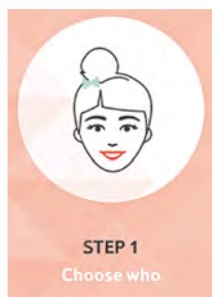

13 March

Look's very own beauty expert, Sam Freedman, will be joining the team on 13 March. To book a 20-minute online chat with Sam, visit Tescoliving.com/beauty/consultations. There are only six slots available on a first-come, first-served basis. Don't miss out!*

The Kimono Update

Last season's tasseled kimono has made way for a brand-new incarnation. Say hello to the longline, floral style that's putting the trendsetters (and the high street) in a spin. Made for layering, these blooms look just as good with midi skirts and floaty dresses as they do with boyfriend jeans. We've even clocked some of our favourite street-stylers rocking theirs over leather bikers for extra warmth. Now that's one versatile cover-up...

● The high street is experiencing a tropical invasion of late, with the classic bomber jacket getting a leafy update.

● Make it your new staple and wear with ripped denim and basic tees for off-duty cool, and then switch up your workwear by throwing it over tailored separates.

● For something less sporty, look for silky styles that'll work over an LBD after dark, too.

Spring Sweaters To Transform Your Style

Whether you go casual or smart, there's a knit out there to suit everyone

● Box-style sweaters are flattering worn with tailored trousers

Cropped Knit

This ribbed sweater will look great with a high-waisted midi skirt or 'Mom' jeans. Just add a pair of pointed stilettos and an oversized tote, and you can't go wrong.

Pop-Art Number

We love scuba fabric, especially in a punchy print. Try it with denim culottes and metallic heels for a real show-stopping look. Add coloured plastic accessories, such as a chunky necklace.

Supersized Bright

Perfect worn with skinnies and coloured trainers, this chunky knit is best balanced with a slimline skirt. Go for woven-knit fabrics in pastel tones to take you through to summer.

Oriental Sweatshirt

A classic grey sweatshirt is a staple in any wardrobe, but pretty embroidery will set you apart. Plus, you'll tick off the SS15 Oriental trend. Wear this off one shoulder with a pair of slouchy striped trousers.

Colour-Burst Cowl Neck

Look for cable knits in refreshing tones, like yellow and purple, to add some spring zest to your outfit. Cowl necks will go with everything from pencil skirts to peg-leg trousers.

Sleeveless Polo

If you like showing off your arms, this could be the knit for you. For colder days, pair with a printed shirt or long-sleeved tee. Longline shapes will look great over a midi pencil skirt, too.

Marble Jersey

You may not think of sweaters in terms of formal attire, but they do work when teamed with tailored shorts or wide-leg trousers. For a more casual feel, wear with baggy jeans and Converse.

Beauty Editor Sam's news on all things gorgeous

Jo Malone's New Mini Drop

I'm feeling a bit rebellious thanks to Jo Malone's newest fragrance family. Rock The Ages is a limited-edition collection of five colognes, £42 each, that captures Britain's defining eras. Talk about the best history lesson ever. I was hooked on the BBC TV series The Tudors, so it's the Tudor Rose & Amber scent that's earned a spot in my beauty bag. The Lily Of The Valley & Ivy cologne comes a close second, though.

JO MALONE

Suki's Burberry Kisses

Miss Waterhouse's latest campaign is all about customisable lipsticks, so one shade will give you sheer or high coverage, depending on your mood. I'll be pouting like Suki with the iconic Military Red, but there are 28 shades to choose from, £25 each.

Our Exclusive Backstage Pass At The Brit Spa

Ever wondered what goes on backstage at the biggest music event of the year? Well, amidst the hustle and bustle of the Brit Awards was the Brits Spa—a cool hangout that offers treatments to get the A-listers looking gorgeous, and Gaby from Look's beauty team got to try it out.

First, she visited the Simple Hydration Station, where celebs popped in during rehearsals of last week's show for 15-minute Face Gym workout facials. Next stop are nails and hair, courtesy of the beauty and wellness app Priv and VO5's lead stylist at the Brits, Claire Rothstein, who created Taylor Swift and Ellie Goulding's 2015 Brit looks. Tanners to the stars Vita Liberata provided the sun-kissed glow and the B. Make-Up station was on standby—we could seriously get used to all this pampering!

Look's Gaby gets the star treatment at the B. Make-Up station

FACIAL: 'I had facial whipping, derma rolling, facial contouring and radio frequency, all in the name of glowing skin. Well, if it's good enough for the likes of Cheryl Fernandez-Versini, it's good enough for me!'

MAKE-UP: 'It usually takes an hour to get the celebs looking flawless, but the team at B. Make-up whipped me into shape in just under half an hour. My make-up artist's top tip: Apply foundation with a fan brush to avoid streaks.'

NAILS: 'I channelled my inner superstar with a mani from Nicole Scherzinger's UK nail tech, Elize Star.'

HAIR: 'Claire Rothstein gave me Ellie Goulding-esque, tousled tresses with VO5 Give Me Texture Rough & Sexy Sea Salt Spray, £3.99.'

BACKSTAGE AT LFW ALL NEW BEAUTY BUYS YOU NEED... NOW!

Heading to a beauty counter near you, these miracle wonder buys kept frazzled models tip-top

TOPSHOP UNIQUE

The Blush Reboot

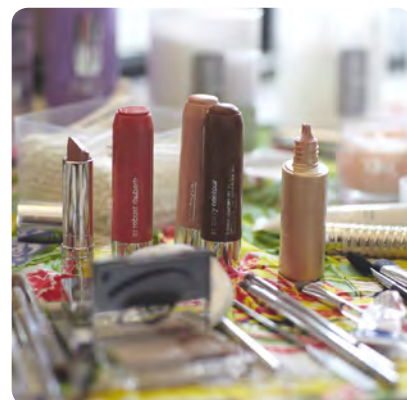

The models looked youthful and flushed at Topshop Unique thanks to make-up maestro Hannah Murray, who blended the new Topshop Cheek Jelly in Museum, £7, over cheeks. The key is to add it slightly lower than you would normally, just below the cheekbone, using your fingers. Her top tip for getting it streak-free is to use Topshop Primer, £12, as a base, with minimal foundation. Out now

MAKE-UP...

Easy Sculpting

At Orly Kiely, models' skin was perfected with Clinique Chubby Stick Sculpting Highlighter and Contour, £19 each. Make-up artist Florrie White got models to suck in their cheeks and swiped the Curvy Contour shade under cheekbones, blending it along the hairline and down the jawbone. The Hefty Highlight was then added to tops of cheekbones and down the nose. Out now

LORD & BERRY

Make-up artists used this tri-colour Lord & Berry Magic Brow Pencil in Blondie, £10, at Kristian Aadnevik to create perfect brows. With three shades in the tip, they were able to use the darkest at the start of the brow, then twist the pencil to the lightest towards the tail.

JULIEN MACDONALD

The Lady Is A Vamp

When Val Garland says the lip colour du jour is reddy-brown, you listen. That's why Julien Macdonald agreed to this vampy shade at his show. Val prepped with L'Oréal Paris Color Riche Lip Liner in Intense Plum (out March), then added L'Oréal Paris Color Riche Matte Lipstick in Mon Jules and finished with Glam Shine Gloss, £8.69, over the top. The colour didn't budge. Launching March

Aswanky polish was used at Badgley Mischka to create Swarovski crystal-embellished talons. Underneath tips were painted black, so when Deborah Lippmann Nail Polish in Can't Be Tamed, a bronzy shimmer, was added over the top it cheated an ombre effect. Launching August

On The Wish List

We can't promise this retro 70s shade will make it to market, but we seriously hope it does. At Shrimps, manicurist Michelle Humphries mixed together Maybelline Color Show Nail Polish in Wow Orange, Candy Apple and Midnight Taupe, £3.99 each, to create a terracotta nail that suited every model's skin tone. Launching TBC

HAIR

Retro Volume

We fell in love with the hair at Matthew Williamson, which was inspired by Bridget Bardot and Kate Moss. The bouffant crown and relaxed wave got ooohs and ahhs from the Look office as soon as models hit the runway. The wonder product creating the look was Toni & Guy Hair Meet Wardrobe Glamour Sky Huge Volume Dry Shampoo, which adds volume as well as texture. Every. Woman. Needs. This. Launching September

MATTHEW WILLIAMSON

The New Beachy

Love the waves that Bumble's original Surf Spray gives, but hate that matte texture? You need to give newbie Bumble and Bumble Surf Infusion, a go. It's half salt spray, half oil and was used at Erdem to create shine but also added a tousled texture through the ponytails. Clever! Launching May

The Ferrari Of Dryers

An early call time at 7am requires a speedy hair look, so Emilia Wickstead hairstylists put a mass order in for this new Babyliss Pro Italia Brava Hairdryer, £100, which comes with a speedy Ferrari engine! Yes, it's that fast. Out now

The brand new EIMI range was used backstage in NYC at DKNY, and in London at the Guynel show. The hero product is the Stay Styled Hairspray, £14.70. It's better than anything we've tried at keeping even the wispiest of strands in place. Launching May

All Eyes On You

Want amazing lashes or the best liner flick? Get the look with Max Factor make-up artist Caroline Barnes and Max Factor Masterpiece Collection

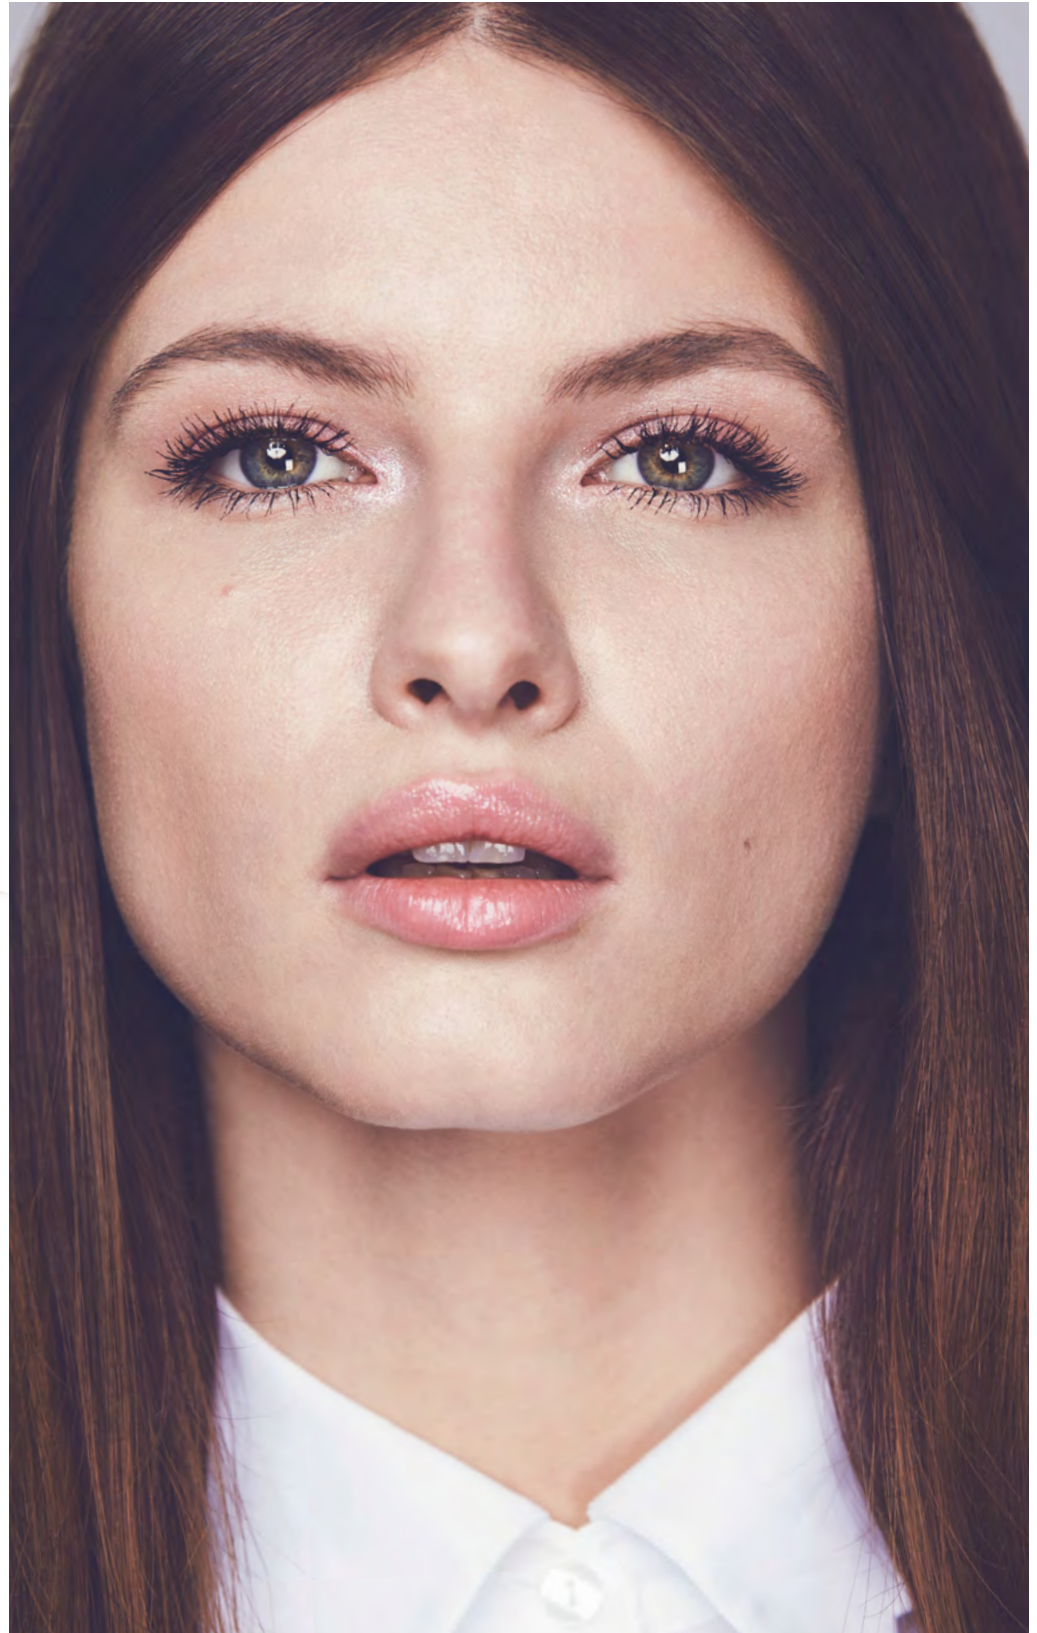

Maximum Eyelashes

Mascara is officially back and better than ever. Barely there lashes are long gone and big, bold eyes were all over the catwalk for SS15. For a glam flutter, layer your mascara, building up layers for a striking full-throttle finish.

Get The Look

Caroline reveals the tricks to perfecting loaded lashes...

- 1 Blend Max Factor Masterpiece Colour Precision Eyeshadow in Icicle Rose, £6.99, over lids. Then apply Max Factor Kohl Pencil in Black, £4.99, smudging with a cotton bud to make the roots of the lashes look thicker.
- 2 Go for a volumising mascara, like Max Factor Masterpiece MAX Mascara, £9.99. Apply two or three coats and make sure your lashes don't dry in between layers.
- 3 A dusting of powder underneath the eyes will absorb excess oil and prevent mascara smudging.

Glamour Flick

This season, Dolce & Gabbana stole our hearts with their polished make-up perfection – we saw groomed brows and clean feline flicks finished off with bold lips. It's old-school glamour with a fresh feel and it's our new go-to look for a big night out. A soft kohl keeps the look feeling modern and chic – this is one you have to try.

Get The Look

Caroline tells us the easiest way to get elegant eyes...

1 Prep lids with a sweep of foundation and a dusting of powder. Use Max Factor Kohl Pencil in Black, £4.99, to draw your flick, then if you need to, tidy with a cotton bud and make-up remover.

2 Use a natural-coloured pencil, such as Max Factor Eyebrow Pencil in Hazel, £4.99. This tone will create depth to your brows instead of making them darker.

3 Coat lashes with Max Factor Masterpiece MAX Mascara, £9.99. Push the brush into the base of your lashes to deposit extra mascara. Finish with a slick of red lipie.

*Max Factor products are available at Boots. All prices are RRP. Pricing and promotional decisions are at the sole discretion of the retailer.

Chocoholics, Rejoice! The New Cookbook Every Woman Will Love

Who wants an excuse to eat chocolate all day?

We've all heard the health benefits of eating a single square of dark chocolate, but when was that ever enough? Well, it's time to thank the wonderful chocolate makers at Hotel Chocolat, because their new book A New Way Of Cooking With Chocolate hits shelves on Friday 6 March, and it turns out you can get a cocoa fix with every meal and stay healthy.

Ever since their launch ten years ago, Hotel Chocolat has strived to ensure its chocolate is delicious and good for you. Owners Angus Thirlwell and Peter Harris set about making chocolate that contains a lot less sugar than other brands. They do this by upping the cocoa content, so all their chocolates are rich in the good stuff, leaving you so much more satisfied.

They're also the geniuses behind Supermilk – a milk chocolate with a 65 per cent cocoa content that's still super creamy. Perfect for those with a sweet tooth, who know they need to cut back on the white stuff. This new cookbook is the next venture for the pair, and they want the world to know that chocolate is a brilliant addition to a healthy diet. We certainly don't need telling twice...

Breakfast: Cocoa Green Tea Blueberry Smoothie

Drinking a healthy juice or smoothie is a brilliant way to start your day. And, yep, we know the superfood benefits of a cup of green tea. But, while they're good for you, they can be a bit, well, boring. Enter this tasty morning drink, which – with the power of a little cocoa – immediately becomes an exciting breakfast you can look forward to. The blueberries and cocoa mean it's also rich in antioxidants and flavonoids that aid circulation to the brain. All of this will keep you super focused, so it's perfect before that big, important meeting. It's also, you know, chocolate for breakfast, so you shouldn't really need persuading.

INGREDIENTS (serves 4)

2 green teabags
20g roasted Hotel
Chocolat cocoa nibs
180ml hot water
1½ tbsp honey
300g fresh or frozen
blueberries
500g natural yogurt
10 ice cubes

METHOD

1 Place the green teabags and cocoa nibs in a bowl and pour on the hot water, infusing for three minutes. Remove the tea bags and stir in the honey.

2 Put the mixture and all the remaining ingredients into a blender and blitz until the ice cubes have broken down completely.

Green tea has never looked so appealing

Lunch: Roasted Vegetable Salad With Puy Lentils, Goat's Cheese & Chocolate Chips

Chocolate in a salad? Yep, it's all we've ever wanted but, sadly, it didn't seem possible. Now, Hotel Chocolat has made our wildest fantasies come true! OK, we'll admit, there is a good amount of veg in here too, but chocolate still has a starring role, adding so much to the flavour and texture. The nutty cocoa nibs and sharp goat's cheese balance out the sweetness of the beetroot and potato, making it the perfect lunchtime treat.

And it doesn't just make your taste buds happy; this salad contains more of those skin-boosting antioxidants and promises to help you stay alert through the afternoon. Sweet potato keeps blood-sugar levels stable, and gives you a slow release of long-lasting energy. The puy lentils are a great source of protein to keep you full, and both count towards your five a day. So you can say bye-bye to that 3pm slump.

INGREDIENTS (serves 6)
2 sweet potatoes, peeled and cut into cubes
3 beetroot, peeled and sliced
6 tbsp olive oil
1 garlic clove
200g puy lentils
1 tbsp vegetable bouillon powder
3 spring onions

A small bunch of chopped parsley
20g shelled walnuts
20g roasted Hotel Chocolat cocoa nibs
100g goat's cheese, rolled into balls
2 large handfuls of watercress

METHOD

- 1 Toss the sweet potatoes, beetroot and garlic into a roasting tray with three tablespoons of olive oil, and some salt and pepper. Cook in the oven at 180°C for 35 minutes.
- 2 Meanwhile, boil the lentils with the vegetable bouillon powder, before adding the spring onions and parsley. Stir through the roasted veg and cool to room temperature.
- 3 Crush the walnuts and cocoa nibs together, then roll the balls of goat's cheese in them to cover them with the mixture.
- 4 Spread the watercress on a large serving plate and spoon out the roasted vegetables and lentil mix. Place the goat's cheese on top and drizzle with the remaining olive oil.

Dessert: The Rabot Mousse

Your days of skipping dessert are over. This recipe uses a smooth custard base that you add your preferred types of chocolate to. Plus, by serving it in shot glasses, you can control your portion size. Hotel Chocolat suggest using 50 per cent, 80 per cent and 90 per cent chocolate to experience a range of flavours, and to add extra toppings. We love almonds and sea salt (shouldn't work, but it so does). And if you were feeling guilty about indulging, don't – the mousse has a low GI and is full of antioxidants.

INGREDIENTS (serves 6)

2 egg yolks
25g caster sugar
225ml whipping cream
125ml whole milk
3 x 120g of your favourite milk or dark chocolates
Toppings of your choice

METHOD

- 1 Whisk the eggs and sugar in a bowl, then boil 125ml of the cream and all of the milk in a pan. Pour one third of it over the eggs and beat.
- 2 Put this back into the pan with the rest of the mixture and heat gently, stirring occasionally until it reaches a thickened consistency.
- 3 Pour the mixture through a fine sieve into a bowl and mix with a spoon for four minutes.
- 4 Divide the mixture evenly between three bowls, then beat a different melted chocolate into each portion. Leave to chill in the fridge for five to eight minutes, while whipping the remaining 100ml of cream in a large bowl.
- 5 Remove the mixture from the fridge and beat each one for 10 seconds. Then fold one tablespoon of whipped cream into each one until completely combined. Gently fold one third of remaining cream into each mix.
- 6 Decant into shot glasses or espresso cups and chill in the fridge for a couple of hours to set. Garnish with your chosen topping before serving.

Alexander McQueen: Savage Beauty

OK, so we can't afford to buy couture, but that doesn't stop us wanting to stand and stare at it. And as Europe's first and largest retrospective of the late Alexander McQueen's work goes on display at the V&A, that's exactly what we'll be doing until August. From 14 March to 2 August; visit Vam.ac.uk.

'Shhh! We're VIPs'

Forget about bribing the bouncer – we show you how to access the UK's elite members' bars

CAHOOTS, LONDON

Located in a disused tube station that was once an air-raid shelter during the Blitz, Cahoots is set to be a favourite with the Prince Harrys of the world. But anyone can get in with the right password. You simply have to find out what it is on Twitter.

81LTD, LIVERPOOL

You need to text for an invite to this bar (no, we're not revealing the number – you'll have to try a bit harder than that) before you receive a door code for its staircase above a hot-dog restaurant. It's all very hush, hush.

BOILERMAKER, NOTTINGHAM

Fancy hitting up a kitchen boiler shop on a Friday night? Er, neither do we. But wander through the shop front and the 'staff only' door, and you'll find yourself in a different world altogether. Plus, no passwords required!

PANDA & SONS, EDINBURGH

From the outside, this retro shop front looks like a barbers where hipsters go for beard trims. That's until you step inside and solve a series of clues to find the hidden bar tucked away at the back. Tip: Wear sequins if you want to fit in.

Lucy's Top Tips...

- Every woman should have a good mix of gold and silver pieces in her jewellery box. Wear them together for an easy way to make a statement.
- Look to past eras for inspiration. I often mix 60s-style miniskirts with 90s logo crop tops for a cool clash.
- Show skin strategically. Flash flesh on your stomach, legs or cleavage – never all three!
- My favourite SS15 trend is sports luxe, so expect to find me in slogan sweaters, varsity tops and colourful trainers.

A walk with my dog Digby...

...is how I start each morning. Then I get ready for filming or, if I have a day off, I'll catch up on emails before meeting my agent over lunch.

Juggling filming with running my jewellery business...

...can be full-on, so I unwind by watching a movie with friends or cooking vegetarian dishes. I also like to catch some sun, so I take regular trips abroad when I have enough downtime.

My style crush is Stella McCartney.

Her collections are always so perfect and I really admire her ethical views. On the high street, I shop at Urban Outfitters. The graphic prints and kitsch accessories add a bit of fun to your wardrobe.
